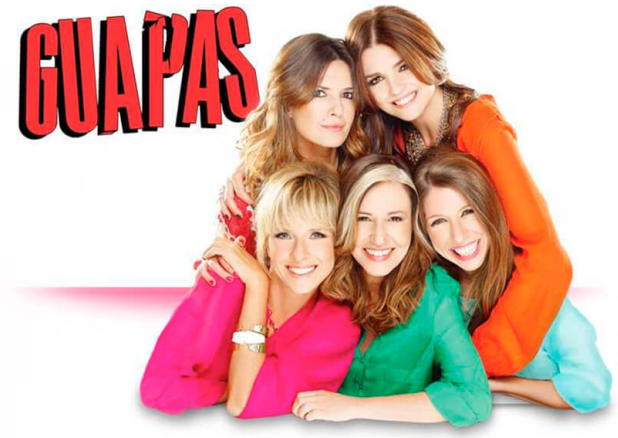
GUAPAS



SYNOPSIS

Mónica (Mercedes Morán), Mey (Carla Peterson), Lorena (Florencia Bertotti), Andrea (Araceli González) and Laura (Isabel Macedo) meet each other during a protest at the bank where they had their savings, which suddenly closes its doors and keeps all their money. So, one day to the next, all their dreams and plans vanish into thin air: Monica's restaurant has to close its doors; Lorena can't buy a house for her parents; Mey's family inheritance disappears; all of Laura's savings to get a fertility treatment to start a family with her husband vanishes; and Andrea and her husband lose their whole estate and are broke.

Seven years after that "fateful" day, the five of them have become friends, but they still haven't gotten over their huge loss and are struggling to get their financial and emotional act together.

What is missing is a new and unexpected "earthquake" in their lives so that they can ponder the depth of their personal stories. Something like a second chance. The last chance to fall in love, have a family, follow a vocation, heal wounds or simply to overcome defects and fears, those that paralyze us and don't let us have the life we yearn for.
